FROM THE PASTOR'S DESK

My Dear Parishioners,

Love God and love your neighbor. This short and clear commandment expressed the whole of the law of God. Today we don't like to think of God's word as a law, so we can say simply that this short statement sums up the whole of our Christian life. It is so very simple and so very difficult.

Loving God has always been a bit difficult because God is not present the way that another person is present. This difference also has made loving God easier because we are never quite sure what it means to love God. We do know that we must prefer God and His word, His Scriptures to all other realities.

The invitation to love God and to love our neighbor becomes very concrete in the love of neighbor. It is not just any neighbor that we must love, but the neighbor who is right in front of us. The neighbor is not the person who lives next door but any human being who happens into our life. This neighbor is especially the person that we don't want to help, the person who may have injured us, the person who seems unworthy of our help, the person who will take more of our time than we want to give.

Always in the Gospel we find this teaching of the Lord Jesus: love those who don't love you; love those who are your enemies; love those who slap you and injure you.

As we consider this invitation to love, we can understand more completely why our ancestors in the faith were not faithful to the Lord, as heard in the first reading today. Moses was clear in his teaching. Moses taught the people what he knew that God wanted taught. The Scriptures continue to teach us what God wants of us. It is much easier to change the meaning of the Scriptures than it is to change our hearts. So, in the history of our faith, both in the Old and the New Testaments, we find the tendency to turn away from God, the tendency to change what God wants into what we want.

Marriage is one of the easiest examples to look at in terms of the change of teaching. It is an easy example because it is Jesus Himself who tells us that Moses changed the teaching because of the hardness of heart of the believers. Jesus continually calls us to repent and to return to the clear teachings given in Scripture and the clear teachings that He gives to us.

We can allow our hearts to be changed today, or we can continue as we are, with hearts hardened by doing things our own way. Jesus calls to us: Love God and love your neighbor. Listen to Him.

Peace,
Fr. Monteleone

PRAYER FOR OUR NATION

Prayer for our Nation (U.S.A)

God our Father, Giver of life, we entrust the United States of America to Your loving care.

You are the rock on which this nation was founded.
You alone are the true source of our cherished rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

Reclaim this land for Your glory and dwell among Your people.

Send Your Spirit to touch the hearts of our nation's leaders. Open their minds to the great worth of human life and the responsibilities that accompany human freedom. Remind Your people that true happiness is rooted in seeking and doing Your will.

Through the intercession of Mary Immaculate,
Patroness of our land,
grant us the courage to reject the "culture of death."
Lead us into a new millennium of life.
We ask this through Christ Our Lord.

Amen

LIFE MINISTRY

Catholic Teaching on Voting for the Lesser of 2 Evils
Colin B. Donovan Commentaries September 25, 2024 in National Catholic Register

In an in-flight interview Sept. 13, Pope Francis was recently asked about the U.S. elections and noted that both major candidates are “against life,” adding that a voter must choose between “the lesser of two evils.”

Both brief comments represent a shorthand for a developed Catholic moral theology about complex moral decisions, especially when the options are imperfect, as is often the case.

In 2006, Pope Benedict XVI articulated a clear statement of the principle of social goods, which the Church considers important both in legislation and in elections. These “common” or “social” goods are necessary for a well-ordered society and, therefore, those who govern society should govern in keeping with them. The public political character of a candidate should, therefore, be judged by the extent to which their governance history, their current policy views and objectives coincide with the common good.

Since these are often in service of their party’s objectives, the party’s platform should also be considered. These elements belong to a prudent judgment about the merits of their candidacy and how they will likely govern.

In his March 30, 2006, address to a group of European Parliamentarians, Pope Benedict stated that “the principal focus of [the Church’s] interventions in the public arena is the protection and promotion of the dignity of the person, and she is thereby consciously drawing particular attention to principles which are not negotiable. Among these, the following emerge clearly today: the protection of life in all its stages, from the first moment of conception until natural death; recognition and promotion of the natural structure of the family as a union between a man and a woman based on marriage; the protection of the right of parents to educate their children.”

Here, Pope Benedict identified the principle social goods that human beings need to flourish: life, the natural family structure, and the freedom to raise one’s children in accordance with one’s beliefs. Only then will society itself flourish in accordance with our nature and God’s plan.

The purpose of governing is, therefore, to facilitate these common goods, not to substitute others that do not serve human flourishing. Likewise, to the extent that a candidate’s views and policies would advance these goods, they are worthy of our vote. To the extent that they would not, they are unworthy of it.

Unfortunately, it is all too common that candidates do not hold these social goods at the center of their political views or hold them imperfectly. In such cases, as Pope Benedict noted, the voter should choose the lesser of the evils. By this, he means we should vote for the candidate who would do the least evil, in order to prevent the evil that the other candidate would do. It is this choice of the will that redeems our vote. However, in doing so, we should make clear to others, who may wonder, that our purpose was to prevent a greater evil and was not to support the evil the candidate for whom we voted might do.

Although Pope Francis used the life issue as his example, it is clear that more than life in the strict sense (abortion, euthanasia) is at stake in any election. As noted above, Pope Benedict identifies three goods that flow from human life. In addition to the life of the individual — without which no other rights or goods matter — there is the life of the basic cell of society (natural marriage and family) and the liberties that are necessary for individuals and families to live and flourish. Thus, when comparing candidates to determine which one has the least evil views and policy positions, all three principles must be considered.

While clearly few candidates in any election perfectly hold these human and Christian values, it is often clear that some profess contrary values against one or the other, or even all three, of these paramount goods. Some candidates hold them deeply by conviction, and they have spent political careers fighting for them. The thoroughness of those views and their past and current policies and actions are the best guide to how the candidate will govern.

In the end, as Pope Francis noted, the voter must choose. Both the Catechism and the moral tradition teach this. In our constitutional system, it is the people who govern, but we do not fulfill our role if we do not help elect those who will represent us well or prevent the election of candidates who will not. If we cannot choose a candidate who seeks the common good across the board, then we need to choose the one who will do the least harm. To choose otherwise is to abdicate our responsibility to vote.

 bold added

Note from Support Life Ministry: One candidate advocates for furthering access to abortion with no restrictions or limits making it a right in law. The other candidate has no policy position that furthers access to abortion.

ST. PHILIP PREPARATORY SCHOOL

The SPPS students have been very busy this week! The students participated in our annual trunk-or-treat Last Friday. They all had a great time! Everyone celebrated Halloween on Thursday, October 31st. The younger kids enjoyed the parade and even had some educational fun in the classroom! The third grade class participated in a STEM challenge after reading a Halloween story. They had to make a fence with only popsicle sticks and clothespins to keep out the “creepy carrots”. It was a lot of fun!

At the beginning of the school year, we reflect on the benefits of a Catholic education at St. Philip Prep. This school offers a holistic education that emphasizes academic excellence alongside moral and spiritual development. Students benefit from a strong sense of community and values, fostering respect, discipline, and service to others. The curriculum integrates religious teachings with critical thinking, encouraging students to explore their faith while developing essential life skills. This combination prepares our students not only for future academic pursuits but also for becoming compassionate and responsible members of society.

Bishop Sweeney continues the annual tradition of recognizing an individual or couple in each parish who is a faithful steward and personifies love in action as described by St. Paul in his words, "Vivere Christus est, for me to live is Christ."
